NEW EMPLOYEES BRING CLAIMS

The flood of new employees to the marketplace the past few years has been great for the economy, but it presents challenges for employers. Many of these workers are inexperienced and some may even be unqualified. Hiring practices that don't adequately evaluate employees can lead to business failures and may also contribute to rising indemnity claims.

APPLICATIONS ARE NOT FACTS

An impressive interview and well-crafted resume can lead to quick employment. But here are some sobering numbers for employers that have been reported in various surveys.

- 30% of business failures are due to employee crime³
- 46% of employment, education, or reference checks revealed discrepancies¹
- 30% of the adult population has a criminal record⁴
- 74% of all drug users are employed⁵
- 40% of industrial fatalities can be linked to alcohol abuse⁵
- 14.1% of construction workers used drugs in the last 30 days⁶
